Our dear Uzbekistan is boldly stepping into a new era of national development. Huge changes are taking place in all aspects of our lives.

One of the priorities of our state's policy is to raise the young generation to be perfect children in every way. Along with physical health, spiritual maturity is also important in raising a perfect child. In his speech, the leader of our country emphasized that the issue of youth is at the center of state policy in our country.

"We will not allow any kind of radicalization in our society, the poisoning of the minds of our youth with destructive foreign ideas, the use of religion for political purposes, the substitution of ignorance for enlightenment," President Shavkat Mirziyoyev said in his address to the Oliy Majlis and the people of Uzbekistan. The bright future, the building of a powerful state depends on the scientific potential of today's generation, and it can be seen in every aspect of our country's attention to the youth. For this reason, the conditions created for young people to become well-rounded people from the first days of independence are being strengthened today.

But despite this, it is worrying that there are some gaps in the education of young people in our society, that there are more and more children who are not interested in studying, who do not read books, who are trying to live an easy life, and whose upbringing is difficult.

The 21st century is an extremely developed era of information technology. In this century, computer technologies and the Internet have reached the peak of their development. Looking at the present day, the number of internet users is increasing day by day. Everyone aspires to enjoy this ease and comfort.

The Internet can be compared to the world. Whatever you look for in it, you will find it. It only takes a person's consciousness and thinking to know that what is found is correct, reliable and, most importantly, harmless. The majority of young people actively use the global network. The fact that some young people who do not know the difference between good and bad, who do not know the difference between right and wrong, accept certain information and messages transmitted over the Internet as absolute truth is a cause for serious concern. The words of our great enlightener Abdulla Avloni, "Education is a matter of life or death for us, or salvation - or destruction, or happiness - or disaster" were important and relevant for our nation a century ago, but they have not lost their importance even now.

"ZiyoNet" educational portal was established in our country in order to protect our youth from various biased information. They are provided with e-learning resources and internet. This allows young people to enrich their worldview, acquire knowledge, and become the owner of modern knowledge.

As we all know, today the internet has become a limitless resource. At the same time, he managed to provide learning, fast communication, control and many other facilities. It is a pity that information and propaganda that contradict our national, religious and moral values are also spread through it. In the articles published in the mass media, we can witness that our young people unknowingly get into this path, use the Internet incorrectly, and fall under the influence of various harmful and biased currents.

The development of information and communication technologies - from simple communication to collaboration devices - has reached a qualitatively new level. The Internet, e-mail, and mobile phones have made communication between people much faster and easier.

"It should be noted that the fastest means of information - the Internet is increasingly entering our lives. At present, the number of Uz domain websites and information portals in the global network has exceeded 400, most of them operate in foreign languages, and it is noteworthy that a new generation of Internet journalists is being formed in this direction," said President Shavkat Mirziyoev.

Unfortunately, there are forces that are using the advancements in the field of modern information technology for evil purposes and turning it into a path of development, and they are interfering with the peaceful life of people with their efforts. Extreme responsibility is necessary for the upbringing of the young generation.

In this complex process, protecting the spirituality of young people from harmful information flows is one of the urgent issues. The most dangerous part of information attacks is that we may not notice the harmful consequences hidden in the essence of information in time, because such information comes in hidden on the basis of other information and damages the human mind. These are:

- Spreading false information
- Manipulation of social consciousness
- Erosion of national and spiritual values
- Inculcation of foreign ideas and foreign spiritual values
- Distorting and changing the historical memory of the people
- Cyber terrorism.

The possibility of information attacks to harm the younger generation is very high. After all, as a result of information attacks, violence, obscenity and tyranny, contempt for values, suspicion of the government and its people, forgetfulness of identity and other negative attitudes can be formed in the minds of the young generation. Currently, it is impossible to prevent young people from using all kinds of information.

All these tools are becoming an integral part of everyday life. Young people cannot be banned from using the Internet; instead, they should be taught how to use it properly at a young age.

Based on the accumulated experiences, it was observed that the following factors give practical results in the formation of ideological immunity against foreign ideas in young people. Including;

- Organization of seminar training aimed at preventing information attacks that threaten the minds of young people, forming the culture of using the Internet and other information resources among young people;

About the negative impact of accessing certain sites, watching brutal and obscene movies, playing violent computer games, rich in fighting scenes, on the morals and education of young people. permanent organization of educational activities involving the leaders, chairpersons of community gatherings, parents of students and youth;

- Conducting activities aimed at preventing the showing of pornographic films that are obscene, contrary to our national identity and mentality, promote violence and indecency, have a negative impact on spiritual thinking, education, and prevent minors from spending time in Internet cafes at night, involving local authorities;
- Paying attention to the issue of educating young people in the spirit of nationalism and patriotism. In this regard, conducting practical activities involving problem youth;

In addition, there are many sites that promote religious fanaticism and corruption, and they are capable of misleading people, especially teenagers.

We must be careful that information attacks do not poison the minds of young people and turn them into idiots. For this, first of all, it is necessary to properly educate the young generation, to raise their spirituality, to form their ideological immunities that can resist negative evils, and to prevent the emergence of a spiritual vacuum in their minds. In this regard, parents, teachers, residents of the neighborhood, as well as representatives of the general public, are required to be equally responsible.

- It is necessary to speed up the process of implementing the "family rules for using the Internet".

In order to protect young people from harmful information flows, first of all, it is necessary to create ideological immunity in their minds. Ideological immunity is carried out through the formation and promotion of spirituality. For this purpose, it is necessary to make effective use of the main criteria for the formation of spirituality in the hearts of the young generation - our holy religion, unique masterpieces of the incomparable folk oral creativity, our national literature, art and other means.

Regular monitoring of youth employment, creation of conditions and opportunities for productive use of their free time.

Supervise young people in educational institutions, attach them to necessary tasks, activities and public works during their spare time, regularly conduct educational activities among them.

It is permissible to form youth supervision in cooperation with family, neighborhood activists, and teachers and trainers of educational institutions. In this case, it is appropriate to establish the "Parents University" system.
